

THINK CHILDREN POSSIBLY SLAIN OUT OF REVENGE

Letter Sent to Police by Father of Dorothy Rogers, Revealed

THREAT IS BARED

Portions of Missive Are Made Public by The Authorities

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—(INS)—Possibility that the two little children, Dorothy, 4, and Timothy, 2, or Allan Rogers, Woodbury, N. J., insurance agent, were slain out of revenge by the missing show girl sought on suspicion of murder in a nation-wide hunt following the discovery of the skeleton of a little child at National Park, N. J., was seen by police today with the revelation of a letter received by the bereaved father.

The letter was purported to have been written by Gladys Parkes Baker, the ex-chorus and cabaret dancer, with whom he entrusted the two children.

"I am going to take them far, far away where you won't see them again," she threatened.

Mrs. Baker, it was said, had demanded that Rogers cease claiming fatherhood of the children as she wished to be known as their mother.

The letter read in part:

"I am writing to let you know that there is no use of your coming around to the neighbors and blowing off your face about your being the father of the children.

"I thought that when I took the children we had an understanding. You told me you might want to get married again and no woman would want you with six children. I am going to move and take the children far, far away, where you won't see them again. I am not going to leave any address, because I am raising the children, not you."

Another theory—that the children entrusted to the care of the former Philadelphia model may have met their deaths after having outgrown the age when they might be used as principals in a blackmail plot—was advanced by Camden police today. Late developments, according to the New Jersey police, would indicate that both youngsters had been called upon to play the role of illegitimates in order that their foster-mother might collect large sums of money from unsuspecting lovers.

Descriptions of the missing ex-show girl have been sent to every large city in the country but police believe she is either in Philadelphia or St. Louis but refuse to reveal their information which leads them to the belief she may be in these two cities.

PLANE TALK

By HARRY A. SUTTON
Of the Technical Staff,
The Aviation Corporation (Written Expressly for International News Service)

9. Navigation
Aerial navigation ("avigation"), is the art of flying a plane from airport to airport and of determining its geographical position. There are four methods: Pilotage, dead reckoning, astronomical navigation and direction radio.

With only pilotage and dead reckoning does the average flier deal. Astronomical navigation concerns itself with the determination of position by the heavenly bodies, and direction radio, by wireless signals so broadcast that so long as a pilot hears them he can find his proper course.

Pilotage consists of the constant location of position either by reference to a map or by landmarks familiar to the flier. Dead reckoning of the direction in which he has traveled, his speed, and the elapsed time. A combination of these two is used by the ordinary cross-country flier.

In all aviation, the compass plays an indispensable part. It is essential that the flier be thoroughly familiar with its operation, its variations and deviations and their causes. For ordinary purposes, a simple magnetic compass is employed, although there are special types for aircraft, such as the earth inductor compass, the gyro-compass, the radio compass and the sun compass.

(Tomorrow's article of Plane Talk will deal with Applied Navigation.)

Students Turn Out For B. H. S. Play Rehearsals

There was a large and enthusiastic turn-out yesterday of talent for the starting of rehearsals for "Page the Prince," the dashing new musical comedy to be staged here in the high school auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings, November 21 and 22, as a benefit for the high school.

"Page the Prince" is a show full of romance and hilarious fun. Not only is there an abundance of comedy but the musical numbers and dances are decidedly catchy and out of the ordinary. The cast is the largest, the songs the sweetest, and the dances the peppiest ever staged by the high school.

Rehearsals are being conducted daily, and Miss Boyer, the director from the John B. Rogers Producing Company, of Fostoria, Ohio, who is rehearsing and staging the show, is very well pleased with the enthusiasm shown by the students.

Tickets for "Page the Prince" will be out Monday. They can be had from high school students, teachers and members of the cast.

Every available seat was taken, and a number of late-comers stood in the rear. There were approximately 250 present, and a larger crowd is expected this evening when the second and final performance of the clever play, "Up in the Air" is given. The comedy was directed by Sam Shire.

"ON TO PRINCETON" IS SCOUTS' CRY THIS WEEK

Generous Pass Issued by Athletic Association To Football Game

DISTRICT MEET ENJOYED

"On to Princeton!" seems to be the general cry throughout the Scout troops in the county this week as the big Princeton-Lehigh game will be held tomorrow.

The athletic association there has given a generous pass to the Bucks County Council organization to be their guests at this game. Troops throughout the county have sent in their reservations for hundreds of scouts and leaders and it looks as though there will be many more at the game than the 610 of last year. Princeton and Lehigh have had equal success in their schedule this year which promises every Scout a "live" contest.

The first district Scout meet for November was held at Doylestown last Saturday at the Doylestown high school grounds with Troop No. 2 of Doylestown, Scoutmaster Isaac J. Vandersanden, winning the district championship with 31 points; Chalfont No. 1 winning second place with 22 points; Doylestown No. 1, third place with 18 points; and Ringelsville No. 1, fourth place with 14 points. The judges of the events were: J. Purdy Weiss, George Hart, and Edward C. Steele. Time keeping was done by Dr. Walter F. Hancy. Approximately 125 people enjoyed the contests. Troops in other districts are looking forward to the results of other Scout meets to be held on the remaining Saturdays of November, with the exception of the ninth, as the county championship meet on December 7th, is one of the outstanding activities on the county council program.

Boy Scouts will be serving as messengers and ushers at the county teachers' institute, Doylestown, this coming Armistice week and a national speaker has been secured to speak on Scouting.

Wimachtendienk, the national Boy Scout honor brotherhood, of which Bucks County Council has a lodge, is having its annual meeting ("Wigwam") at Camp Buccoo this coming Armistice week, beginning Wednesday, November 13th, and concluding Sunday, November 17th. Many fun activities and good times are enjoyed at Buccoo during the "Wigwam." Initiation of members into the second and first degree will be part of the program as well as the annual election of officers.

PASSING INSTITUTIONS

The country store is passing. It is going to join the covered wagon, the town pump and the ox team. Thousands of them still keep their old estate, but in other thousands glittering fixtures, plate glass show-cases, gilt cash registers and steam heat have supplanted the wood stove, the opened nail kegs, the cracker barrel and the dry goods box handy for the whittler's blade.

With its mingled smells of new rope, kerosene, yellow soap, coffee, cheese, plug cut and calico the country store is an institution as American as green corn and apple pie. If it is the will of the ruthless gods of commerce to destroy this institution it will be to the great loss and with the great regret of the vast rural population of the nation.

What the department store is to the city the cross roads general store has been to the country. It has the compendiums of the wants of man. It has been even more than that, for through it the farmer and his good wife were able to convert butter and eggs into shoes and sealing wax.

What the club is to the city the general store has been to the country. The country store has been the forum and intellectual arena of a large area of this broad country. These countless centers for rustic gathering have been the fountain-heads of those rivulets of politics and opinion that joined themselves into irresistible floods of national opinion.

Rural America is in process of transformation and every step in that process brings nearer to obsolescence the country store of song and story, of the jester's fling and the cartoonist's pencil. The hot-dog stand, roadside garage and tea house are siding in the extermination but can never take the place of this pioneer institution.

LESSONS OF LIFE

Every person should go to the cemetery at least twice in life. Once at the end of life, and first early in life to reflect on the brevity of life and the insufficiency of worldly goods. There is no place like a quiet churchyard for meditation and there is room in every life for more serious thought.

The tombstones hold a moral for all living. There is inscribed the human virtues, but among the inscriptions there is no record of estates left behind, fortunes made and spent and worldly fame attained. The magnitude and sculpture of the stone or the vault alone remain to remind the world of "the boast of heraldry and the pomp of power."

Why should human beings worry and struggle through life's fleet span in pursuit of wealth, fame, luxuries, vanities and all those other evanescent things we choose to call riches? The poor are distressed by too little money, the moderately wealthy by the thought that others possess more wealth than they, and the rich by too much money.

The Garden of Paradise was paradise only so long as Adam and Eve entertained no thought of worldly things. There were no pestering bank accounts, troublesome servants, expensive automobiles, business worries and social and fashion detractions in Paradise.

Habitual silence isn't proof of wisdom, however, unless he is a married man.

"Chillicothe" Mrs. Lamar repeated, "Jerry was born in Boston."

his face was flushed, he seemed to know what he was talking about. Now she knew it was the end. Since she had lost, she would call it a night and wash her hands of the whole affair. It was too bad for Wally and Vi, but this could not go on indefinitely. Uncle Steve was not the man she thought him to be in the beginning, and it was too late now to try any new schemes.

"Wait a minute, Mr. Lee," she said, getting up, but he interrupted her.

"During the past two weeks, I've learned your real character, Jerry, your true self. I haven't had much experience with women, but I know you're a fine person. From the bottom of my heart I—I—honestly—respect you."

Genuinely moved by his sincerity, she threw off her mask completely, and replied quietly:

"I guess this—this has gone far enough, and I—"

By this time he had arisen and come to her side. He took her in his arms tenderly.

"Why, Jerry, if I thought for one moment that you could care for me, I'd be only too happy to ask you to be my wife."

"Please, Mr. Lee—"

"Jerry, I love you," he persisted, with his face close to hers, his arms wound tightly about her waist. Before she could reply, his lips had fastened themselves to hers.

"Please, Mr. Lee," she was finally able to say. "After all you've just said, I can't let you go on thinking that I'm—"

"I know, Jerry. You're not the slightest bit intoxicated. I can see that now."

She freed herself from his arms and looked at him wonderingly.

"This has been a shock to me. Whatever must you think—"

"That you're the sweetest little girl in the world," he finished for her, taking her in his arms once more.

"Please don't—do that again."

"I beg your pardon—"

"I can't let you go on thinking—things," she explained, walking over to the bedroom door and opening it.

"Mother?"

"Yes, dear."

"Were you asleep?"

"I'll be right out," came the voice from the other room.

Uncle Steve looked from the door to Jerry, and from Jerry to the door, and without saying a word, he was asking for an explanation. If this was some kind of a game, it was a puzzle to him, Jerry only smiled sadly and kept her eyes on the door until a sweet faced old lady came out. She was small, not at all unlike Jerry in appearance, with lovely white hair arranged high on her head. Her dress was not smart, but neat and becoming, the kind of a gown a conservative woman of her age would naturally wear.

"Yes, I did drop off," she said, as she came out. "Has the company all gone?"

She started looking around the room and when she saw Lee, she looked at her daughter questioningly.

"Quite a while ago," Jerry replied, "but there's a gentleman here I want you to meet."

Lee, realizing he was quite unsteady on his feet, clutched a chair for support.

"Mother, dear," Jerry introduced them, "this is Mr. Lee. He gave the party for me."

"It was very kind of you, sir. I'm delighted to meet you."

She offered her hand, and Uncle Steve took it, trying not to appear too astonished at what was taking place. He still could not understand it, but he must not show his surprise.

"I'm delighted to meet you, Mrs. Lamar," he acknowledged the introduction, waiting for Jerry to offer some sort of explanation.

"I guess Mr. Lee wonders where you've been hiding, Mother."

"I've been tucked away in Jerry's room. I'm visiting her just for this week. You see, I only got in town today and wasn't exactly prepared for a party. My home is in—"

"Yes, I know," Lee interrupted. "Chillicothe?"

"Chillicothe?" Mrs. Lamar repeated.

By this time Jerry was ready for almost anything. She looked at her mother with pleading eyes, begging her silently not to give her away, but Mrs. Lamar was not the sort to understand such signals. The way she repeated the name of the town was proof to Lee that something was amiss.

"I thought perhaps you still lived where Jerry was born," he explained.

Again Jerry's eyes sought her mother's, but Mrs. Lamar went on relentlessly.

"Jerry was born in Boston. We've always lived there."

"You see, Mother, I was—sort—of telling Mr. Lee about—about."

"About her early life in Chillicothe," Uncle Steve supplied.

Jerry knew now that it was all over. Her face felt as she saw Lee's determined look. She had spoiled it for Wally and Violet, and now she had ruined her own chances. She knew Uncle Steve well enough to realize that he would stand for many things, but duplicity was not one of them.

"Mrs. Lamar," he finally said, "I mustn't keep you up any longer. Good-night."

"Good-night, Mr. Lee."

He left them there and walked towards the door, with Jerry at his heels. There was so much she wanted to tell him! But she had not the slightest idea how to start. Perhaps he would help her out. She stood silently while he took his hat and stick, waiting for him to say something to her. At last he turned to her:

"Thanks for a very charming evening, Miss Lamar. Thanks also for your talented performance on behalf of the modest little Violet. I'm sure you found the audience refreshingly gullible and easy to convince."

"Please, Mr. Lee," she interposed, "I—"

"In other words," he went on, "I've been a fool, but there is a limit even to my folly. Good-night."

"Mr. Lee, there's something I—"

"I cannot imagine anything you could say now that would interest me. You will agree with me, I am sure, that I have listened to quite enough for one evening—and as for Miss Lamar."

He was out of the house in a moment, before Jerry could say a word, and as the outside door slammed, she knew he had gone for good.

CHAPTER X

Jerry sank into a chair, and now for the first time she really wept. It had all been a colossal joke, and she had been the goat. Mrs. Lamar sat down beside her, laying Jerry's head gently on her shoulder.

"Jerry, what has happened?"

"Oh, mother, it's such a long story, and I'm so ashamed of myself."

"Tell me, Jerry," Mrs. Lamar urged.

Then the whole tale came out between sobs, how her intentions had been to arrange a match between Violet and Wally, and in her attempt to make a good job of it, she had lied and lied to Uncle Steve.

"And now, he'll never forgive me, and I won't blame him," she concluded, still sobbing.

PROGRAM PRESENTED BY YOUNG BLIND STUDENTS

Girls Give Numbers Before Village Improvement Association, Doylestown

IN SPLENDID MANNER

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 8.—The Village Improvement Association members and friends had the privilege of listening to a program presented by a number of blind students from the Royer-Greaves School for the Blind, King of Prussia, in the Presbyterian Church, here, this week.

The performance of the young women, who were classed as sub-normal when they entered the school, was splendid, and elicited many favorable comments.

Eight students took part in the program. As a chorus they gave two three-part songs by Brahms "Dusk Man," and "Lullaby."

Miss Sears, one of their students, READ THE COURIER "ADS" DAILY

is responsible for this chorus. She accompanied them on the piano. Aside from this she teaches mathematics, which is considered to be one of the difficult subjects for the normal mind. The students also presented a scene from the book entitled "The Sacred Garden."

Decides Miss Sears, another student played the piano; and then another, Miss Mildred Skelton, read by the braille system the story of "The Orol."

A selection of very handsome and useful articles made by these students were displayed and placed on sale.

Those who saw the performance of these young ladies could hardly conceive of the fact that they had been sub-normal. Their chief need it seemed, was special attention.

A cordial invitation was extended to everyone to inspect the new building of the Royer-Greaves school which will be opened during the first week of December.

Miss Marian Darst, who was delegate to the Fall meeting of the County Federation at Bristol, gave a brief outline of the meeting.

POLLYANNA COLYUM

"Why don't you attend church?" asked the minister of a non-attendant. "Well, I tell you, sir: The first time I went to church, they poured water in my face, the second time they tied me to a woman I've had to keep ever since."

"Yes," said the parson, "and the next time you go, they'll throw dirt on you."

Children believe in skatecity first.

It won't always do to judge by looks. Many a hell-cat has a "sweet face."

Fashion is something created to keep the husband of a pretty girl broke.

When the tired business man can retire to a farm and the tired farmer can retire to town both believe they will be satisfied, but they won't.

Joe—I'm gonna kiss you and kiss you and kiss you. Gladys—That would be only three times.

The really suspicious wife is she who suspects her husband of leading a double life just because he bought a two-pants suit.

A man at a private dinner party put his napkin in his coat pocket, broke a piece of bread in a cup of coffee, slapped the hostess on the back, and said "Excuse me, I thought this was a formal party."

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 9.—(INS)—The heroism of a Boy Scout who saved a younger lad from certain death and dislabeled to mention the incident because it was "just my daily good turn" is to be rewarded.

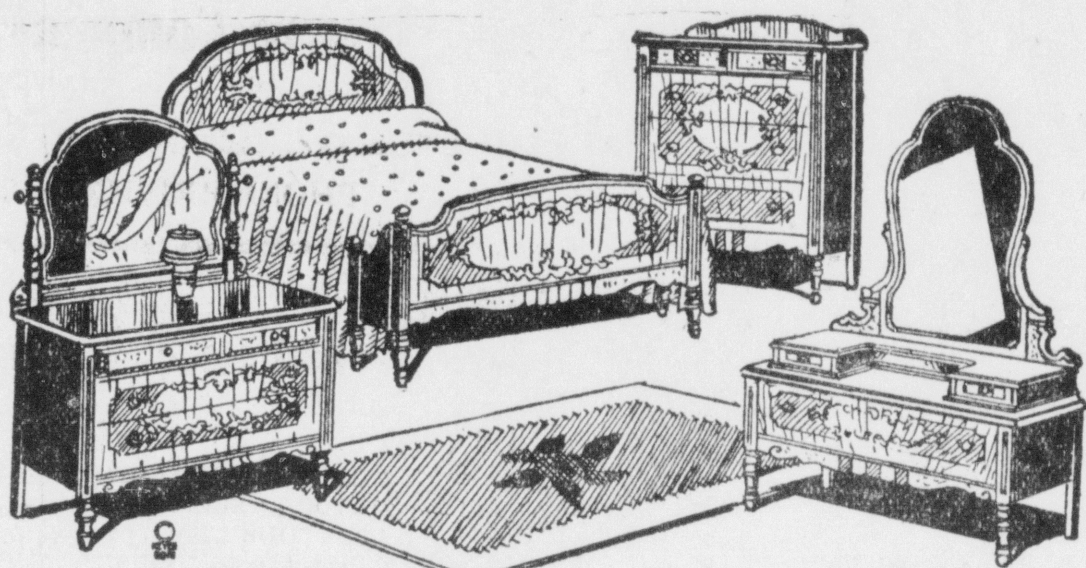

The lad recently ran out on a railroad bridge in front of a train, picked up a 5-year-old boy and, clasping the boy in one arm, hung onto the edge of the trestle with one hand while the train thundered by. Railroad men say the younger boy would have been killed instantly had not Fichter rushed to the boy's assistance.

Walter Fichter, Jr., 14, of West Hazleton, will be presented with a certificate of heroism from the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America on November 21.

Walter led the child to safety, went home and said nothing about the affair, the details not coming to light for weeks afterward.

Landscaping is the Final Touch to Home Modernization

IMPROVE THE LANDSCAPE OF MODERNIZED HOME

FINAL CONSIDERATIONS ARE IMPORTANT ONES

The man who has modernized his home and the man who contemplates modernization must use landscaping as the final touch which completes the picture.

Even the house that was built last year or a few years before may be in need of a proper environment to set it off properly.

Even the house with all of the latest architectural style has a raw and unfinished look if the landscaping is neglected. The lawn may be green and well trimmed, it may be level and rolled, but landscaping will improve the appearance of the dwelling 100 per cent, when the landscaping plans have been carried out.

Work From a Plan

The home owner who is going to do a thorough job of landscaping his grounds will work from a plan. He will plot out his work in advance so that his efforts will be concentrated and direct.

If possible, call in a landscape architect to aid in your plans. The fees charged by these experts are not high, although their extensive work on large estates and real estate developments have given the average man the idea that they are a luxury which he cannot enjoy. If no landscape architect is available, doubtless a salesman for a nursery concern will give you his advice in return for orders.

But whatever the source of information, work by a plan. Know what you are striving to accomplish before you set out your shrubbery and flower beds.

The Importance of the Lawn

After you have graded the lot and rolled it so that it is level and ready for planting, sow grass seed if the lawn is in bad condition. A stretch of velvety lawn is just the first step in the plan.

Next comes the planting of shrubbery and hedges. A low, trimmed hedge along the public sidewalk and the boundary lines of the lot, defines the limits of the property and holds the lawn together, artistically speaking. Well massed shrubbery may be set at angles in the shrubbery to soften the abrupt change in line. Near the house additional shrubbery should be used to conceal the foundation of the dwelling. Flower beds are often set near the house for the same purpose.

The lawn should be kept clear of shrubbery as a lawn broken by beds does not have that clear sweep which emphasizes its spaciousness.

Gardens Are Necessary
Usually the flower gardens are placed at the side or rear of the house. They should be so located that a pleasant view of them can be obtained from the windows of the house. Often they are located with reference to the living room or a sun porch. These flower gardens may be formal or otherwise, depending on the attitude of the owner.

The kitchen garden is always placed at the rear of the lot because of its utilitarian nature. This garden may be extensive, but often is small.

Trellis work, arbors and ladders are used to train vines and taller shrubbery. Vines are often trained against the side of the house to relieve the bareness of the walls. They aid in giving the home a cozy, comfortable atmosphere.

A pergola has a decorative value and will aid in giving the house a more low and clinging appearance. Vines may be trained over the pergola. The old-fashioned grape arbor still has an important place in the landscape plans of the man with a spacious lot.

Rock Pools Make Charming Vista

A small informal pool is always delightful and creates a most charming vista. The pool is usually constructed with a concrete bottom, rocks being placed around the sides to emphasize its informal atmosphere.

Sometimes the concrete pond is rectangular in shape, a narrow walk being constructed around the edge. A fountain may be placed in the center to supply fresh water from overflowing its boundaries.

These rock pools and more formal concrete pools and ponds often contain water lilies and other aquatic plants. Gold fishes in the pools with prevent mosquitoes from breeding.

A formal concrete walk in the back lawn is often avoided as being too trim for the treatment of the garden. Stepping stones made of irregular pieces of concrete or flagstones are used because of their artistic and informal atmosphere. Curving over the lawn with turf surrounding each stone they lend a charming aspect to the vista.

Interior Entirely Remodeled

The rearrangement of the floor plans of the house entailed new decorative designs throughout. The walls are all new and from a casual inspection the average person would never suspect that the main portion of the house was several decades old.

Duplex House Once Old Frame Structure

The duplex house noted above is not a new building. It is the modernized version of the old, dilapidated dwelling shown to the right. These pictures show what modernization can do toward turning deserted houses into profitable investments.

BRICK CONSTRUCTION OFFERS ADVANTAGES

The use of brick veneer in the modernization of the house offers many advantages that are not found in other types of construction. The brick veneered home, no matter how small, has an atmosphere of dignity and worth that often is not found in frame or in stucco. It looks expensive, although often its cost is comparable with wood.

With brick the home owner can get the widest choice in color tones, both in artistic blends and uniform shades. The charming textures in brick meet every taste, no matter how exacting.

One of the material advantages of brick construction is its fire resisting abilities. Since about 25% of all fires originate without, this point is one worthy of consideration. These fireproof qualities are reflected in lower insurance rates, for the surface that will resist fire merits the approval of the insurance underwriters.

Another point of advantage that is mentioned in connection with brick is the lessened heating cost in winter and more comfort the year round. Lessened heating cost because brick is wind-tight and keeps the warm air within. During the hot summer months brick veneering prevents the fierce outside heat from penetrating the house, if doors and shutters are kept closed during the hot period of the day.

THE OLD COMMONPLACE HOUSE IS NOW A HANDSOME DUPLEX

There are many old, worn out houses standing idle because they are too far run down to be attractive for the average renter. These houses may have sound timbers and built into them the best of workmanship, but if the exterior lines are old, the siding weatherbeaten and unpainted, the interior lacking in all of those modern conveniences that make for the comfort and convenience of the housewife, they are avoided.

Houses standing idle are a source of expense. Taxes must be paid, even if no income is derived from the property. A vacant house is like the proverbial horse, standing in the barn and eating his head off.

A Typical Example

The old dwelling illustrated below is a good example of a house that could not be rented because of its run down condition. It stood idle, a distinct loss to its owner.

Finally the idea of modernization was applied to the property. Instead of making a single dwelling out of the old frame, a duplex house with two entrances and two sets of living quarters were developed. The house as conceived by the builder is shown to the left.

The task of modernizing the exterior of the dwelling is not as complicated as it seems on casual inspection of the before and after illustrations. The old L, which is shown to the left of the lower illustration has been added to, the new gable being flush with the old face at the right. The roof lines have been entirely changed by the modernization.

Stucco Siding Now Used

Instead of a frame siding stucco is now used for the new duplex. The use of stucco is widespread, being found on both large and small residences. In this instance it makes an attractive siding for the general design of the structure.

Each of the new entrances to the house will have a neat little Colonial porch with white pillars and a pitched roof. The doors will be of the same design, wide and hospitable in appearance.

—with the FINEST BODIES ever built for any motor car...

THE COACHCRAFT of the 1930 Nash "400" shows the world how a motor car body should be built. In the new arched-in upper-structure design Nash body designers have replaced customary upper body bulk with grace and slenderness. They have developed new methods of bracing and strengthening which make these 1930 Nash "400" bodies more rigid and less likely to develop rattles than any body ever put on any motor car. The new door, window and windshield opening devices operate with delightful ease. The interior is entirely insulated from the engine. Rear seats are nearly three inches wider. Twin cowl ventilators furnish the most efficient type of interior ventilation. A New generation of motor cars has arrived!

Konjola, the New and Different Medicine, Restores Health and Happiness

MISS DE RETTA WILLIAMSON

"Two years ago I underwent an operation that left me nervous and badly run down," said Miss De Retta Williamson, 6919 Tenner Street, Pittsburgh, Penna. "It seemed that I could not regain the weight and strength I had lost. I derived no nourishment from my food. I was tired all the time; could not get the proper rest at night, and it was with difficulty and suffering that I was able to carry on with my work."

"Konjola helped me from the start, and in three weeks I gained eleven pounds. My nerves are calm, I am much stronger, and am enjoying and getting benefit from my meals. I am continuing with Konjola, knowing that splendid and complete health is just around the corner."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)
